

David is a certified marketing management professional whose expertise combines over 30 years in marketing communications and public relations in conjunction with a lifelong career in the theatre as a professional actor, director, and AEA stage manager. A native of Miami, Florida, David moved to Columbus, Ohio in 2013 when he married Professor Emeritus of Law, Douglas Whaley, of The Ohio State University. David is a summa cum laude honors graduate of Columbus State Community College, where he was inducted into the prestigious Society of The Compass for academic excellence and accomplishment. He is an alum of the Florida State University School of Theatre in Tallahassee and was a Faculty Scholar at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. His marketing career began in the corporate meeting planning and special event industry as an assistant to upper management who quickly recognized his technical acumen, strong potential, and enthusiasm for ushering the organization and its subsidiaries into the digital age. Within three years, he had risen internally from an assistant in one department to leadership of another. Before moving to Ohio, David had a long career as a Director of Marketing Communications for a non-vacation group travel destination management company which specializes in meetings, incentives and conferences. David's design firm DAVARGO, LLC focuses on corporate collateral and theatrical graphic design. Additionally, David freelances as an audio book narrator and a voice-over artist.
